1/6

Most meetings fail before people start talking.

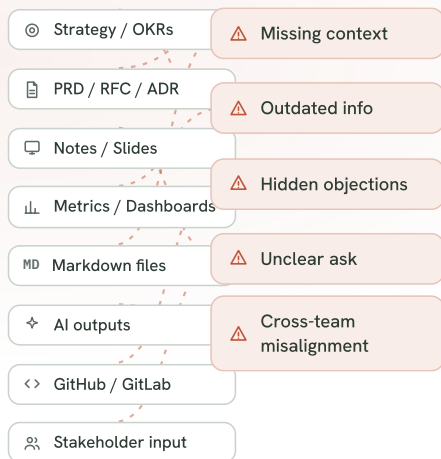

From 1:1s to cross-functional reviews, the problem is the same: context is unclear, and weak spots only surface in the room. Proben collects context, checks readiness, and shows what to fix before the meeting starts.

WORKS FOR ANY MEETING SIZE

1:1s to 100+ people

1 Context is scattered

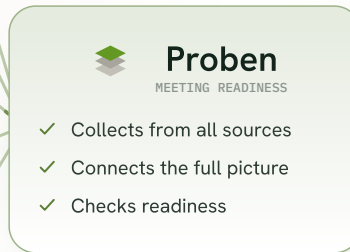

Sources, people, and knowledge are fragmented.

⚠️ Fragmented, partial, and not ready for the room.

2 Proben checks readiness

Collects context, checks 5 signals, prepares a brief.

✓ Same flow for any meeting size.

3 Readiness before the meeting

One brief before the room discussion, checking.

WHAT PROBEN CHECKS

Five signals. Each maps to a concrete question.

Delivery / voice is scored only after you practice — readiness is about the argument, not the performance.

SIGNAL	WHAT IT ASKS	STATUS	SCORE
Goal clarity	Do you know what decision you need?	Strong	8.0
Strategic context	Does your idea connect to company goals, OKRs, strategy, customer insight, revenue, cost, or risk?	Weak	5.8
Evidence strength	Do you have numbers, examples, assumptions, or proof?	Medium	6.0
Stakeholder risk	Do you know what each person will push back on?	Weak	5.5
Decision ask	Is your ask specific enough to approve, reject, or revise?	Weak	5.2

✓ Add a business-imp
Enterprise segment blocked by existing product validation, low engineering resources

✓ Clarify the decision
Define what result makes the 2-week validation worth continuing — and what kills it.

✓ Reframe pushback as risk management
Position the validation as removing a hidden cost, not disagreeing with the pivot.

Likely questions

"Why now?"

"What does this delay?"

"Do we have enough data?"

"What is the expected business impact?"

"Who owns the validation?"
